FLOOR DEBATE

March 25, 2002 LB 1085

people are challenged because they have no ability to connect with the real world, then discussions of the kind we're having here on this bill would be apropos. You don't look for sense where people talk only nonsense. I think Senator Jensen knows his amendment is not going anywhere, but one thing I will promise you all. If you add any of these items to the committee amendment, and if the committee amendment becomes the bill, then it's open for me to amend or offer amendments in any way that I choose, and I will do that and take all the time that you all will give to me. There's only one person who can probably stop me, if he can get 33 votes. What thing has been floated on this floor that can draw 33 votes? Not one thing. So Senator Jensen is now becoming the great compromiser. I'd like to ask Senator Jensen a question.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Would you respond, Senator Jensen?

SENATOR JENSEN: Yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Jensen, do you remember when you and I were youngsters, a fella running around in Congress, and he was known as the great compromiser. Do you know the name of that person? Can you recall offhand? It was a long time ago for both of us. Do you recall his name?

SENATOR JENSEN: Not right offhand.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: I might have somebody who might...now I'm going to ask Senator Landis if he recalls, or has read.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Senator Landis.

SENATOR LANDIS: Yeah, I believe you were just of voting age at that time. It was Henry Clay, wasn't it, Senator?

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you, Senator Landis. Now, do you remember that Henry Clay had said, "I would rather be right than president"? He said...and he was neither one ever. (Laughter) Never either one. So when we go through these routines, it gives the opportunity for issues to be discussed. If the public can lay with us long enough and listen, they may begin to get an
